It Was Indeed a Friendly 'Christmas Punch' Party

Sailing

ON Monday, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Cato Glover will set sail for what is one of the prize plums of the United States Navy. The Glovers made their home here until several years ago when they went to Norfolk for duty. Most recently they have been at the great naval installation at Corpus Christi, Tex. A fortnight ago, Cato Glover was promoted to Vice Admiral and designated by President Eisenhower as U.S. Naval Deputy Commander in Chief of Mediterranean Forces with NATO headquarters at Malta.

The Glovers have been in Washington for the past 10 days, visiting with two of their daughters, Mrs. Albert Carpenter and "Paddy" Glover, who at the moment is working with CIA.

At Malta, Admiral Glover will be the ranking U. S. naval officer in the Mediterranean portion of NATO. Before going to his new post, Admiral and Mrs. Glover will make stops in London, where the former will confer with Admiral Lord Mountbatten, First Sea Lord of the British navy; in Paris for conferences with Gen. Alfred Gruenther, supreme Allied commander in Europe; in Naples for talks with Admiral William Fechteler, commander in chief of southern forces.
